ATTACK ON MR. JOHN BURNS.

Why He Took His Salary of £2,000 a Year.

SCENE IN THE HOUSE.

Speaker Rebukes Angry Ministerial Demonstrators.

For fully five minutes Mr. Claude Hay, the Unionist member for Hoxton, was last night the central figure in an angry scene in the House of Commons.

Mr. Hay had been moving an amendment in regard to the misery in London among the labouring classes due to the want of employment. He proceeded to quote the statement to the effect that Mr. John Burns had declared that he only took the salary of £2,000 relating to his office because he would not be a blackleg. At the mention of this word Mr. Hay was interrupted by a storm of Ministerial shouts of "Withdraw!"

For five minutes Mr. Hay's voice was drowned in the uproar.

DAINGEROUS WEAPONS.

The Speaker at length rose and addressed the Ministerialists. "I must remind hon. members that by making use of such weapons as the preventing of an hon. member from speaking they may be using rather dangerous weapons, which may at any time be used against them. If the hon. member for Hoxton had said anything which was not parliamentary, I should have called upon him to withdraw it."

"If," said Mr. Hay, "I misrepresented Mr. Burns I express my regret."

Mr. John Burns, who was received with loud Ministerial cheers, said Mr. Hay had wasted the time of the House with a réchauffé of stale, flat, and unprofitable criticisms of himself. To notice them would be to dignify them and to give them the substantiality that they lacked, and the hon. member would pardon him (Mr. Burns) if he did not indulge in the recrimination.

The attack upon himself must have secured from newspapers as innocently ignorant of his (Mr. Burns's) past record on this subject as the hon. member had proved himself to be. (Loud Ministerial cheers.)

The amendment was negatived without a division at 12.15, and the Address was agreed to without a division. The House adjourned at 12.20.

LORD MILNER'S WARNING.

The centre of attraction for members of Parliament yesterday was the House of Lords, whether M.P.s repaired in a flock to hear the first speech of Lord Milner, the great South African administrator.

His lordship began by asking the Secretary of State for the Colonies whether he could give the House any information as to the form of the proposed Constitutions of the Transvaal and the Orange River Colony.

He was an out-and-out advocate of ultimate complete self-government, even in the Orange River Colony. If he had not been, he could never have put his hand to the terms of surrender in which that prospect was referred to; but he contended that the process by which that self-government should be given ought to be a gradual one.

That was the key to the whole political situation in South Africa. (Cheers.) A cautious line in Constitutional development and full steam ahead in the material recuperation of the country was the true policy. As the Government were going to plunge the two Colonies straightway into self-government, it was necessary, if we were not again to lose South Africa, that nothing should be done to impair the growth of the Transvaal or to alienate the affections of the British settlers.

After Lord Milner had spoken, the House rose at 7.30, to resume the debate to-day.

HANDIEST GUIDE TO THE HOUSE.

All the year books and almanacs, inasmuch as they were compiled previous to the general election, are quite useless for the purpose of giving information regarding the personnel of Westminster.

The handiest complete guide to the House is that published by the "Daily Mail." It is issued at two prices, on paper, 1s. (post free 1s. 1d.), or mounted on cloth with brass rollers, 2s. 6d. (post free 2s. 8d.). The latter form presents a particularly handsome appearance, and should appeal to those who desire to possess a permanent record of an historic election. The guide consists not only of a chart graphically illustrated in colours, but also of a 16-page handbook, making an exhaustive "Who's Who" of Westminster.

Orders should be addressed either to The Publisher, 2, Cannon-street, E.C., or to Messrs. George Philip and Son, 32, Fleet-street, E.C.

YACHTING SWINDLER.

Gallay, the French Bank Clerk,
Tells His History.

LOVE AND FORGERY.

(FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.)

PARIS, Monday Night.—Gallay, the bank clerk, who absconded on a yacht to South America with £35,000, was brought up for trial to-day, with Mme. Valentine Merelli, who accompanied him on his adventurous voyage.

Gallay, who is rather tall, well set up, and fair complexioned, with hair of a blonde colour, was correctly dressed in a dark morning coat and vest. His linen was immaculate, and he wore pince-nez.

He was closely followed by Valentine Merelli, faultlessly dressed in a plain dark costume and black hat. She settled down next to Gallay, separated from him by one of the guards. She showed great calm, and, after wiping away a few tears with an exquisitely-embroidered handkerchief, wore an air of easy, well-bred unconcern.

She is decidedly good-looking, with a long aquiline nose and a somewhat Grecian cast of features, with dark hair and eyelashes.

One of the witnesses, M. Sohet, the husband of Merelli, defaulted, but wrote to excuse himself, and in a letter which the Judge read out aloud stated that, knowing the character of his erring wife as he did, he did not believe her to be guilty.

The presiding Judge traced Gallay's antecedents, beginning with his career in the police. He was dismissed from the post because his conduct was found to be loose, and he engaged in the buying and selling of motor-cars instead of attending to his police duties.

"In July, 1904," said the Judge, "you committed your first theft from the bank, to the amount of £120."

"Yes," replied Gallay, "and the greater part of the money went to pay my household expenses."

A LIFE OF PLEASURE.

"And then you began to live a life of pleasure. You were fond of cafés and gave tips of £4 at a time to bandmen for playing the tunes which you liked."

"Oh, if you only knew the exquisite pleasure music affords me," exclaimed Gallay, whereupon there was a good deal of laughter.

"And then," continued the Judge, "you asked a woman named Miladi to make you acquainted with a lady, and you offered £200 for the introduction."

"My act has been quite misunderstood," replied Gallay. "What I was looking for was a sister soul."

"And the sister soul turned out to be a married woman who had deserted her husband," remarked the Judge.

Mme. Merelli was then examined. She had married M. Sohet because she found life very dull in a provincial town. After she left her husband she made the acquaintance of a well-known financier, an Italian prince, and a wealthy Chilean, who had furnished a flat for her.

"And once, when your husband called to see you at the flat, you turned him out, did you not?"

"Yes," replied Merelli hesitatingly, "but we previously parted in a friendly way."

SWINDLING AN EASY TASK.

Gallay was then examined by the Judge as to his modus operandi in forging letters and signatures. He said the total amount he had succeeded in getting from the bank was £35,320, and of this amount £23,180 had been recovered from the yacht.

"What a complicated piece of work it must have been to plan all these forgeries," exclaimed the Judge.

"Oh, no," replied Gallay, philosophically. "It was no Roman's work. It was much easier than you suppose."

He admitted that he had done a stupid thing in hiring the yacht Catania, but he wished to make love to Merelli alone on board the yacht, away from the prying eyes of two or three hundred passengers on board a steamer. He had intended to start a new life with her in South America.

The trial will be continued to-morrow and the next day.

ENGLISH FAMILY MASSACRED.

Chinese Destroy Missionary Station and Kill Inmates.

The threatened attack upon the missionaries in China has already begun, according to dispatches received in America.

An Exchange Telegraph Company's telegram from New York says that an English family of missionaries named Kingham, consisting of two adults and two children, have been killed. The mission at Kiangsi has been destroyed, but fourteen Americans escaped.

Reuter states that Mr. Rodgers, the American Consul-General at Shanghai, in a cable to the State Department, reports that six French Jesuits and two members of the Kingham family were killed in the anti-missionary outbreak at Nanchang.

The cable adds, however, that accounts are conflicting.

Mr. Harry Kingham and his wife are attached to the Plymouth Brethren Mission in Nanchang, the capital of Kiangsi. The Americans mentioned are evidently the Rev. R. E. Maclean and his wife, Dr. M. R. Charles and his wife, Miss K. L. Osborn, and Miss Bertha Beard—all of whom belong to the Methodist Episcopal North Mission in that town. Two other Europeans in Nanchang are Mr. and Mrs. Thor, who are attached to the China Inland Mission.

An American gunboat has proceeded up the River Yangtze, but the nearest point to Nanchang that can be reached is Nang-kang, one hundred miles away.

Mr. D. E. Hoste, the general director of the China Inland Mission, who has just returned from China, yesterday told the Daily Mirror that the recent difficulties in Shanghai do not imply another general outbreak.

He believes that the Chinese Government desires to maintain peace and to protect foreigners. Mr. Hoste adds that missionaries must refrain from interference with the lawful jurisdiction of the mandarins over their converts, and the Chinese Government will not permit or initiate active hostility.

DIPLOMATIC MURDER.

Privilege of Immunity Abandoned, and Assassin
Will Surrender.

BRUSSELS, Monday.—The "Etoile Belge" states that M. Waddington, the Chilean Chargé d'Affaires, to-day called on the Public Prosecutor, and informed him that his son renounced his privilege of diplomatic immunity, and desired to take his trial in the Belgian courts.

The jury of the Brabant court will therefore have to pronounce a verdict on Saturday's drama. M. Carlo Waddington will give himself up to the Belgian authorities this evening.—Reuter.

GERMAN CONCESSIONS.

Prepared to Give Way to France on the Question of Policing Morocco.

Germany, it appears, is now ready to make substantial concessions on the Moroccan question.

At least, the Berlin correspondent of the "Petit Parisien" states that Baron de Courcel, while in the German capital, ascertained with certainty that Germany would not now oppose the co-operation of Spain, Italy, or any other Power with France.

The London correspondent of the same paper declares that in an interview with M. Saint-Germain, member of the Senate, King Edward was pleased to recognise the clearness and frankness of the attitude of France at the Algeiras Conference, and the justice of her claims, which Great Britain was supporting with all her power.

MIDNIGHT TELEGRAMS.

The Tsar has issued a decree summoning the imperial Duma to assemble on May 10.

The King of Sweden passed through Cannes last evening on his way to Nice, and Swedish ladies presented a bouquet to him at the railway station.

Socialists interrupted a political meeting of Nationalists at Warsaw yesterday, and in the fighting that ensued thirty-one persons were killed and fifteen wounded.

By a fire at motor-car and repair shops at Moncton, near Ottawa, damage amounting to £300,000 has been done, Earl Grey's motor-car, worth £6,000, being destroyed.

TO-DAY'S WEATHER.

Our special weather forecast for to-day is:—Variable southerly winds (veering north-westerly); changeable and showery (snow or sleet in places); mild at first, colder by afternoon.

Lighting-up time, 6.33 p.m.
Sea passages will be moderate to rather rough generally.

MARQUIS TOWNSHEND

Not Allowed to Read Anything
About His Case.

THE NEXT MOVE.

The Dowager Marchioness Townshend is strongly opposing an application to the Master in Lunacy for the appointment of a receiver to whom to entrust the care of the estates of the Marquis, who has been certified of unsound mind, and is at present under the control of his young wife at the family house in Brook-street.

The application will be heard on Friday before Master Fisher in chambers. Eminent counsel are engaged for both sides.

Meanwhile, the Marquis is perfectly unconcerned in the midst of the excitement which has been awakened over his strange case. Yesterday the house in Brook-street was the Mecca of inquirers from everywhere. But the Marquis Townshend himself was perfectly calm and indifferent. Every effort, as Lady Townshend explained to the Daily Mirror, has been made to prevent his being annoyed by the publicity in which his affairs have become involved.

*NOT ALLOWED NEWSPAPERS.

Newspapers in which the matter is discussed have been carefully kept from him, and only such friends have seen him as have been permitted by the Commissioners in Lunacy. None of these visitors has discussed the matter in his presence.

"He is perfectly satisfied with his surroundings," Lady Townshend said yesterday to the Daily Mirror, "and at the present moment the most to be envied of all of us."

"Though he is perfectly free to come and go as he pleases, he has positively preferred to remain at home, where he may be quiet, and enjoy the somewhat sequestered life which is his choice."

"My husband," said the Marchioness, "is happy here, as you could judge for yourself when you saw us out driving yesterday afternoon. The idea of incarceration is preposterous. It is only that he should not see his friend that his lordship remains at home so constantly."

Dr. Irwin Scott, of Brighton, who is Lord Townshend's physician, and has signed an affidavit that the Marquis is sane, declined to discuss the matter last night.

The Brighton friend whose name has so frequently been mentioned in the case as also seen at Hove by the Daily Mirror, but said his nose at the seal of the Marquis was of a medium height, about forty years old, with a striking face and piercing eyes.

PROCEEDINGS IN INSANITY.

"The Lunacy Commission has no more to do with the detention of the Marquis Townshend than the omnibus drivers in Edgware-road," said a distinguished expert in insanity to the Daily Mirror yesterday.

"In order to have any person incarcerated in an insane asylum, the following things must be done:—

First one of the family must sign a petition showing cause why the person should be detained. Subsequently this must be certified independently by two doctors and then presented to a justice of the peace, who can give the order of confinement without seeing the patient. This process might be finished in less than one hour. As I understand it, this is as far as the matter has gone in the Townshend case."

Relatives, however, cannot touch his money until he has been tried before a jury of twenty-three, in which the majority rules. Before this jury the alleged insane person can be legally represented. After this the matter may go before the Masters in Lunacy, who appoint committees to look after his estate and person.

"Three verdicts are possible. The person may be judged of unsound mind, and incapable of managing his affairs; he may be judged incompetent to manage his affairs but capable of looking after himself; and he may be pronounced sane."

It is very easy to have persons certified as insane on slight grounds, such as eccentricity, but it is very difficult to get them out again.

"I think it difficult to get an absolutely sane person confined in an asylum, but the asylums are full of partially insane persons who ought to be at large, and who are confined simply because they were nuisances to their respective families."

MRS. WELDON'S VIEW.

"Although the Lunacy Laws of England are supposed to have been amended in 1890, in consequence of the campaign I conducted against them, I contend that they are worse than ever," said Mrs. Georgina Weldon, "the heroine of a hundred legal fights," to the Daily Mirror yesterday.

"My knowledge of the terrible condition of the laws regarding lunacy began in 1878, when I was certified insane by four doctors."

"Fortunately, I escaped from my own house, and thus was able to elude the mad doctors. I was not able to take action against them until the Married Woman's Property Act came into force in 1882."

PARTED FOR THIRTEEN YEARS.

Singular Story of a Wife's Long Disappearance.

WOMAN WHO "PROPOSED."

When husbands and wives part, not to meet again for thirteen long years, it is very rarely that the parting takes place on Waterloo Bridge and that the hour is midnight.

These latter were the venue and the time, however, of the incident that separated Mr. Albert John Green and Mrs. Ella Maude Green, who were petitioner and respondent respectively yesterday in a suit decided by the President of the Divorce Court.

Mr. Green had been performing, in the course of his profession of a music-hall artist, at the Trocadero Music Hall, for the date of the parting was 1890, before the "Troc" was converted to its present use. Mrs. Green, who had been wedded to him but a few months, had come to the music-hall to interview him.

As, in Mr. Green's opinion, his wife was unduly excited about some matter he determined to get her away from the music-hall before he heard the matter out.

Owing to her excitement he did not like to take her to his mother's house at Clapham, so he decided to catch the train at Waterloo to Surbiton, where her sister lived.

Attacked with an Umbrella.

All went well until they reached the middle of Waterloo Bridge. Here Mrs. Green's emotions led her to attack her husband with an umbrella.

This unusual behaviour on a woman's part caused a crowd to collect. The onlookers pressed round, and Mr. Green lost sight of his wife. When the crowd was dispersed the lady, too, was gone.

And then thirteen years went by before her husband saw her face again.

In the earlier portion of the thirteen years of parting Mr. Green followed his wife's movements by watching notices in the "Era." Then the notices ceased. He made inquiries. Some people said they had seen her in Belgium; others declared she was in Russia. Yet a third rumour located her in Australia.

But it was in Hammersmith that the reunion, brief as the parting was long, took place. With a legal friend Mr. Green called at a house in that suburb. Mrs. Green came to the door. "Can I see Mrs. Isaac?" asked the legal friend. Mrs. Green said "Yes," but in a moment altered her mind.

"She took one look at me," said Mr. Green, in the witness-box, "and then she shut the door in our faces."

On account of her association with Mr. Isaac a decree nisi was granted.

A happier termination attended another matter settled by the President.

Marriage by Repute.

Mr. Edward Devon Newman, a young man who has not yet attained his majority, asked the Court to declare that he is the legitimate son of his parents, Mr. Alured Newman and Mrs. Ida Newman, who are both dead.

Mr. Alured Newman was the son of the late Sir Robert William Newman, of Stokeleigh, in Devon. When still a young man he went to America, and settled at St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota. Here, before the birth of his son, he became the husband in the eyes of the law of Minnesota of the boy's mother. They lived together and were "Mr." and "Mrs." Newman "by habit and repute." Minnesota regarded the contract between them as binding, as Scotland would have regarded such a contract in a similar case.

Years after, however, a paradox came about. They went through a religious ceremony of marriage at Brighton. This ceremony, so far from serving the purpose for which it was intended, viz., of affirming their position as husband and wife, had a contrary tendency. It cast a shade of doubt on their previous married status. Why did they consider a further ceremony necessary?

The President has now set the matter at rest finally by declaring the Minnesota marriage valid, and its issue legitimate in English law.

£10,000 A YEAR LOST.

What Lady Maple Will Sacrifice When She Marries Again.

If Lady Maple carries out her intention to be married to Mr. Montagu Ballard, she will lose £10,000 a year.

Sir John Blundell Maple, her late husband, left her a lump sum of £10,000, with an annuity of £20,000. The will provides that if she marries again half of this annuity is forfeited.

The late baronet's two chief residences—Childwick Bury and Clarence House, Regent's Park—were left for the use of Lady Maple, and he bequeathed to her, in addition, all his farming stock and part of his racing stock, including the valuable sires, Common and Royal Hampton.

Baroness von Eckhardstein, Sir John's only daughter, under the will receives half the income of a large sum, the whole of which in 1908 reverts to her. She is, however, bound to spend two-thirds of every year in this country—the only provision in the will that is restrictive.

SCOTTISH LAWYER OUTLAWED.

Quaint Antique Procedure in Regard to an Advocate Who Forged His Client's Name.

Robert McDowall, a Glasgow solicitor, against whom there was a previous conviction for embezzlement, failed to appear to answer a charge of uttering a forged cheque.

McDowall acted as agent for a man who raised a successful action against the Edinburgh Corporation, and he received a cheque for £25, from Edinburgh. It was alleged that he forged his client's name to this, and decamped with the money.

Lord Low declared McDowall outlawed in the High Court of Justiciary at Glasgow yesterday.

WELL-KNOWN LADY LITIGANT.

Mrs. Weldon, Losing an Appeal Regarding Gonod Songs, Contradicts the Lord Chief Justice.

Mrs. Weldon, a lady who is well known in the Courts as an ardent litigant, appeared before the Lord Chief Justice and Justices Ridley and Darling yesterday to conduct in person an appeal against the decision of Mr. Muir Mackenzie, Official Referee.

That gentleman held that there was no evidence of a contract under the terms of which Messrs. Mathews, printers, of Great Marlborough-street, were bound to send to Mrs. Weldon certain copies of Gonod's songs for her signature before sale.

Their Lordships declined Mrs. Weldon's request that they should pronounce against the Official Referee's decision as being against the weight of evidence.

Mrs. Weldon (to the Lord Chief Justice): I think you are quite wrong, my Lord. His Lordship: I am afraid I must rest under the imputation.

Mrs. Weldon, who has always fought her own cases, has won some notable victories in court. She recovered £10,000 damages for libel from M. Gonod, the composer, and a verdict of £1,000 against General de Bahe, Mrs. Langtry's father-in-law.

TRIUMPHANT FLATTERY.

"Mr. Walker, of London," Said To Have Adroitly Duped Provincial Tradesmen.

Amusing accounts of the manner in which two Londoners obtained supplies from confiding provincial tradesmen were given in the West London Police Court yesterday, when two men named Walker were charged with having obtained goods by false pretences.

"Mr. Walker will be glad if you will send a sirloin of beef, as he is unable to obtain in London any meat so much to his fancy as yours," was the note which a gratified Portsmouth butcher received one day, according to his own statement. He was flattered when this was followed by the intimation that "Mr. Walker found the beef excellent eating, and would like you to send a shoulder of mutton and two ox tails."

"London butter is very indifferent," was the explanation a Sussex tradesman received of an order, and "Mr. Walker's particular fancy is for local produce, so please send a few wild rabbits," also secured a tradesman's ready compliance.

£100 FOR A LOST ARM.

The Bow County Court Judge yesterday awarded Henry Meyers, of St. Ann's-road, Bow, £100 damages for the loss of an arm injured whilst he was driving a van belonging to Charles Webster, contractor, of Whitechapel.

Mrs. Helen Constance Taylor, of Phillimore-gardens, having died intestate and without any known relations, her estate of about £51,000 was ordered yesterday to be handed over to the King's Treasury.

"PANCAKE DAY."

Gourmets May Enjoy the Delicacy Served in Endless Variety.

500 EGGS IN A "MIXTURE."

This is Pancake Day, and to-morrow ushers in Lent—the period of fasting and self-denial.

The custom of consuming at least one pancake on Shrove Tuesday is generally kept up throughout England, and in London the pancake will be eaten in its thousands in the homes, and will figure on the menus of all the restaurants, from the epicurean Savoy to the cosmopolitan café de Soho.

But the stronghold of the pancake in London is undoubtedly Simpson's, in the Strand, where fully 1,000 people are expected to ask for it to-day.

"I shall use 100 quarts of milk and 500 eggs to make the pancake mixture," said the head chef to the Daily Mirror yesterday. "This will produce about 1,200 pancakes. In the old place I used only about half that amount of milk and eggs. But the demand is greater now."

"Twenty-four pans will be kept going all day on the great range, and two men will do nothing else but look after them."

Served in Foreign Fashion.

At the Cecil Restaurant pancakes will be served with lemon-juice or jam.

"Crêpes Suzette" (pancakes Suzette) will be on the twenty-four pans, where they do not make pancakes "à l'Anglaise."

This is how you make "Crêpes Suzette," according to the manager. After the pancakes are made in the ordinary way they are dipped in a kind of sauce made with ½ lb. of fresh butter, two glasses of orange curaçao, one glass of Kirsch or Cognac, a tablespoonful of castor sugar and a little scraped orange peel. This sauce is melted in a dish over a spirit lamp, and the pancakes are dipped into it one at a time.

At the Carlton pancakes will be served in any way requested. "The Russians," said the restaurant manager, "eat their pancakes instead of meat or fish. The Russian pancake is about the size of a muffin, and it is eaten with caviare and sour cream. In Germany they eat their pancakes with potatoes which are boiled and then pounded up."

TRADE UNION TRIUMPH.

Court of Appeal Unsets Verdict Registered Against Well-Known Printers' Organisation.

After a very long hearing the Appeal Court yesterday overthrew the verdict which Messrs. Ward, Lock, and Co., Limited, the well-known printers and publishers, secured against the Operative Printers' Assistants' Society.

They sued the defendant society and the secretary for damages for inducing workmen in the firm's employ to break their contracts of service and to enter and spoil the plaintiffs' work and for picketing the firm's premises for the purpose of preventing other persons working there.

In the court below the Judge ordered the trade union to pay £650 damages.

Lord Justice Vaughan Williams yesterday said the finding of the jury as to damages could not stand. He was of opinion that there was no evidence whatever that the defendant union or the secretary caused or procured men in the plaintiffs' employ to retire or spoil the plaintiffs' work or materials. There was no evidence that the comfort of the plaintiffs or the ordinary enjoyment of the works were seriously interfered with by watching or besetting.

Verdict for the trade union on all issues, with costs.

MAGISTRATE NOT AN ANALYST.

"I purchased this bottle of ale (produced), and it made me downright ill. I believe I had Asiatic cholera," said an applicant at Marylebone yesterday.

Mr. Paul Taylor: What do you want me to do?—Applicant: Have the stuff analysed.—Magistrate: Oh, dear, no! Go to a doctor.

LOCKIE CASE WITNESSES DISCHARGED.

Mr. Justice Walton, at the Newcastle Assizes yesterday, agreed to a motion to discharge the recognisances of the witnesses in the case of the late Mr. John Lockie, shipowner and ex-M.P. for Devonport.

Mr. Lockie was charged with fraud, and died after indictment.

"SELF-DENIAL" FLATS.

"A lady entered my office the other day," writes Mr. Law, a Putney estate agent, "and somewhat startled us by inquiring: 'Have you any self-denial flats?' You know, those with separate doors." She meant, of course, 'self-contained flats.'

TRUTHFUL POLICEMEN.

New Official Order Calls on Constables To Give Strictly Fair Evidence.

Recent cases in which police evidence has been brought to open contempt are doubtless the reason for a new and stringent order to the Metropolitan Force just issued.

In the future policemen will be expected to tell "all they know in favour of an accused person as well as what they know against him." The phrase, "the police are getting up a case," ought, indeed, now to lose the sinister meaning it has unfortunately had in the past.

To quote from the new order:—"The fact that a person accused of theft had borne a good character must necessarily be a consideration of great importance to the court, and if it should appear that he was driven to commit theft in order to procure some necessary or comfort for a sick wife or child the suppression of such information would constitute misconduct of a grave nature."

"When the police are sufferers from injuries received, they must endeavour not to allow personal feelings or wishes as to the decision of the case to influence their evidence."

SACCO'S GREAT FAST.

Application for Law Case To Be Adjoined That His Attendance as a Witness May Be Postponed.

The remarkable fast of Sacco, at the Italian Circus, came into public prominence at Westminster County Court yesterday.

To Judge Woodfall an application was made to adjourn the action of Jones and Co. v. Fooks and Sacco, on the ground that the last-named had not completed his fast.

The application, said his Honour, was certainly a novel one, but he should not accede to it until he was satisfied that Sacco was a material witness.

Sacco had last night fasted forty days, and was very weak.

CHETWYND ABDUCTION CHARGE.

Judge Says It Is a Question Whether It Was an Attempt To Kidnap or an Effort To Raise Money.

The most sensational case to be tried at the Newcastle Assizes this week is the charge against Thomas Irving Duguid and Esther Clucas Quayle, of the Isle of Man, of conspiring to take from the lawful custody of Mr. Christopher Leyland, of Haggerston Castle, Northumberland, her legally appointed guardian, Mary Chetwynd, the daughter of the Hon. Richard Walter and Mrs. Chetwynd.

It was a curious story, observed Mr. Justice Walton in his charge to the grand jury yesterday. It was, he added, a question whether the prisoners intended to kidnap or were merely trying to get as much money as they could from Mrs. Chetwynd, who was in France.

The grand jury returned a true bill, and the case will probably be tried to-morrow.

PHOTOGRAPH "PRIZE DAY."

Voting Coupons To Be Opened To-day in the Amateur Competition.

To-day we shall open the envelopes containing the coupons on which readers have voted for the amateur photographs which they considered entitled to the weekly prize of two guineas. We offered some days ago.

The photograph published this morning was taken during life-saving practice at Saltburn-by-the-Sea. It is sent by Mr. Robert Clark.

For the guidance of intending competitors we publish the following instructions:—

For every photograph used we shall pay 10s. 6d., and, in addition, a prize of £2 2s. will be awarded every week to the person sending in the photograph which our readers consider the best.

D.M. PHOTOGRAPH COMPETITION.

I vote for the photograph numbered ..... considering it the best amateur photograph published in the "Daily Mirror" during the week ending March 3, 1906.

Voter's Name .....

Address .....

No. negatives should be sent in. Only prints will be considered.

Each photograph should bear upon the back the competitor's name and address and the word "Competition," and be enclosed in an envelope marked "Photograph Competition."

A stamped and addressed envelope must be sent with each photograph if the sender desires it to be returned, but in no case will the Editor be responsible for the loss of photographs.

In order to simplify our system of book-keeping we shall only pay the money on the application of the photographer, who must cut his picture out of the Daily Mirror, and send it in with his request for payment.

PRICE SEVENPENCE.

"TRAVELLER'S CONSCIENCE."

Passengers' Habit of Forgetting To Pay Omnibus Fares.

LOSS TO COMPANIES.

How many people in London are honest enough to pay an omnibus fare if the conductor misses them on his round?

This is a question seriously troubling the omnibus and tramway companies just now. They are doing their best by travelling inspectors to prevent leakages, and by urging extra vigilance upon conductors, but it is calculated that hundreds of pounds are lost annually by this petty form of swindling.

The Daily Mirror, in the course of inquiries yesterday, discovered the interesting fact in connection with this moral laxity that women are the worst offenders.

WOMEN FORGET INTENTIONALLY.

"Every omnibus company suffers in the same way," said an official of the Road-Car Company. "There are various ways of 'biking' on omnibuses, but the most common, and that most difficult to check, is managed in this way. A passenger gets on an omnibus going, say, from Charing Cross to Hammersmith. It is six o'clock at night, and there is a continuous stream of people getting on and off the vehicle. He takes a penny ticket and rides to Hammersmith with it, forgetting to pay the other twopence unless asked for it.

"The conductors," he continued, "are honest enough as a rule, but it is almost impossible for them to keep watch on every passenger during a busy time. When we catch an old offender, however, we make an example."

"SPECIAL TRAVELLING CONSCIENCES."

The conductors and inspectors, or "jumpers," as they are termed colloquially, are very bitter on the point.

"Yes," said a London General conductor in Oxford-street yesterday, "there are a lot of omnibus thieves about. And women," he added ruefully, "are much worse than men. They have a special travelling conscience. I go up on the top to collect the fares, and if they're all female passengers, I'm sure to have to ask two of them separately for their money. 'Oh, conductor, didn't I pay my fare,' they say, and I must reply politely, 'No, mum, you didn't.'"

"About a mile beyond where their tickets take them they want to get down without paying any more. 'It used to be a penny to here,' they plead, and if I deny it they call me impertinent and threaten to write to the company. I had two of them yesterday," he added fiercely.

MOTOR-OMNIBUSES EASY PREY.

With the coming of motor-omnibuses the trouble has increased. The greater accommodation of the vehicle, the longer distances they cover, and the more passengers they carry make this petty thievery easier. According to an inspector of the "Vanguard" service only the keenest vigilance and constant inspection of tickets can stop it.

"It's nothing but thievery," he declared vigorously. "Well-dressed men and women make a practice of attempting to defraud us in this way every day. It's only a penny or twopence, I suppose they think; but they're thieves just the same. They either take no notice when the conductor comes for fares or take a penny ticket and travel threepenny or fourpenny distance with it."

"NO OPPORTUNITIES."

An Old Complaint Which Cannot Be Justified Nowadays.

The complaint is often heard in the mouths of those who have failed to make a conspicuous success of their lives that if they had only had better opportunities in their youth old age would not have found them in their present humble circumstances. However justly this complaint may have been made in the past it can scarcely be admitted nowadays, when the "Harmsworth Self-Educator" will give to anyone capable of a little diligent application the opportunity of attaining success in any walk of life.

The requirements of every conceivable trade and occupation are dealt with in its pages, and thoughts of those who have failed to make a good start on the path of knowledge, the price of each part is 7s., so that it will cost only 8s. 10d. to get up to date.

ANOTHER PETITION FOR MISS DOUGHTY.

A further petition is being prepared in favour of Miss Doughty, who is undergoing imprisonment for attempting to murder Mr. Swan, solicitor.

"WORTHY OF THEIR HIRE."

STRAWS blown about show the set of the wind. The frank statement by Mr. John Ward that he has tried without success to live as an M.P. on 50s. a week, and the suggestion by Mr. Pickersgill, M.P., that the House of Commons should let its members get to bed an hour earlier by finishing at eleven o'clock instead of midnight, are unmistakable indications of the change which is coming over Parliament in the course of the next few years.

The hours and arrangements of the House of Commons are still governed by the idea that its members ought to give their services to their country for nothing, and need not attend to the business of the nation until after they have done their own.

That is to say, we still pretend to regard the duties of a legislator as work that a man can do in his off-time (like amateur acting or watering the garden).

It is not so long since the House used to meet at 4.15 for the benefit of the lawyers and City men who could leave their courts or offices by four o'clock. Now it meets a little earlier, but still most of its work is done after the hour of day at which both mind and body begin to crave rest.

Nothing but incapacity can be expected from an assembly which does not begin its day until the middle of the afternoon. Mr. Pickersgill is too timid. To save an hour by abolishing the dinner interval would be no good. Parliament must meet in the morning, the time when we can all do our best work, and give up its nocturnal sittings altogether.

"Well, but then members will have less time than ever for their own business. Many of them will find it difficult to earn a living."

Just so—that is why payment of members has got to come. It is monstrously unfair for the nation to employ the services of a man like John Ward and to expect him to keep himself and a wife and four children on £2 10s. a week. "The labourer is worthy of his hire."

Once the business of Parliament was so light that it could safely be left to such men as could afford to attend to it for nothing in their off-time. Now it has become so heavy that we cannot afford to rely upon the off-time class any longer.

Suppose a number of country squires and retired soldiers and hard-worked lawyers and busy City men were to go and offer to manage Whiteley's or the Gordon Hotels or Salmon and Gluckstein's without payment and in their spare hours. They would simply be laughed at.

Yet those are the kind of people to whom we have cheerfully entrusted the destinies of the British nation for a very long time past. However, the general election began radically to alter the character of the membership of the House of Commons, and it will not be long before the new spirit is reflected in the forms and hours and constitution of the Assembly.

WILL THE BISHOP ACT?

Last week attention was called to the Church of England's inability to turn out morally or socially unsuitable vicars. If it does not deal with the Rev. Forbes Phillips, it will show that it can enforce no doctrinal discipline either.

This egregious notoriety-hunter has been declaring that he does not accept what is universally believed to be the Church's teaching as to the Resurrection. Obviously, then, he has no right to remain a minister of the Church.

He has announced, however, that he does not mean to resign his living. In that case his Bishop is morally bound to deprive him of it. If this be not done, the words, "Anglican doctrine," will cease to have any meaning.

A THOUGHT FOR TO-DAY.

Life ought to be measured by thought and action, not by Time.—Lord Avebury.

THIS MORNING'S GOSSIP.

POLLING for the much-discussed City election is fixed for to-day, so by this evening the wanderings of Mr. Balfour and Mr. Gibson Bowles over meat markets, fish markets, cabbages, and exchanges will have ceased for the present. Mr. Bowles paid the visit to the Cogers' Hall, always expected of City candidates. He looked as genially nautical as ever, and has indeed been in good spirits all through the contest, in spite of a formidable amount of temper-trying "heckling."

At the Cogers' Hall Mr. Bowles made an amusing speech with excellent anecdote in it about that famous member of the band, that cynical democrat, John Wilkes. Wilkes, he said, met the Prince of Wales (afterwards George IV.) at a gathering where it was considered becoming to sing "God Save the King." It was noticed that Wilkes, the enemy of all kings and of George III. in particular, joined vigorously in the chorus. The Prince of Wales went up to him. "When did you begin to wish that God would save the King, Mr. Wilkes?" he said. "Ever since I met your Highness," replied Wilkes.

The democrat was, by the way, an unusually reckless election fighter. It is Lord Brougham, I

Japan very much "from the inside," and has always been in a position to meet clever or picturesque people. Some of her diplomatic stories are most amusing. I remember one about some foreign prince who had to receive a deputation from the Danish Court. He thought to pay them a pretty compliment by wearing the Order of the Elephant, their highest decoration.

But, curiously enough, he could not find the insignia—ribbon and star, or whatever they may be. So he sent to borrow them from his brother. The ribbon was found, and the prince descended, wearing it, to meet the deputation. That was an unfortunate step, because the deputation had come for no other reason than to present the prince with the very decoration that they found him wearing!

Another of the interesting Court Theatre matinees is to take place this afternoon—a performance of Mr. Maurice Hewlett's "pastoral" called "Pan and the Young Shepherd." This is, I think, one of the quite early works of the adventurous knight that Mr. Hewlett is—one "born out of his due time," who has to dream his adventures instead of acting them. As a matter of fact, one remembers, though, that since he has won fame (and presumably a certain amount of fortune) he has from time to time permitted himself a tramp through Italy, and that some of these, if not so exciting as

TO-DAY'S ELECTION: "BALFOUR v. BOWLES."

"I am sailing on my own political hen-coop."—Mr. Gibson Bowles at Cogers' Hall.
[The storm of Balfour votes coming up to-day will, it is to be feared, prove disastrous to the chicken's hazardous voyage.]

think, who tells how Colonel Luttrell and Wilkes, rival candidates, were standing side by side on the hustings at Brentford, when Wilkes asked his opponent whether "he thought there were more fools or rogues in the Wilkeites (so his supporters were always named) standing in the crowd before them." "I'll tell them what you say at once," threatened the colonel. "Do," said the other coolly; "you would not be alive one moment after." "How so?" "I should merely say you lied. They would believe me and destroy you in the twinkling of an eye!" So the colonel thought better of it and kept silence.

Mrs. Hugh Fraser, the author of that most successful book, "A Diplomatist's Wife in Japan," contributed to yesterday's "Times" an article full of pathetic stories illustrative of the heroic sacrifices made by Japanese patriotism at the time of the war. The spirit which ignores the immediate comfort of individuals for the sake of the common good has, it would seem, never been seen so dominant as it is there. One is reminded, in reading Mrs. Fraser's article, of that Japanese girl who killed herself—a kind of national expiation—when one of her own people tried to assassinate the present Tsar.

One cannot help thinking that Mrs. Fraser's life has fallen amongst pleasant ways. She knows

Mr. Belloc's walk to Rome, have apparently satisfied his love of the unexpected.

For the rest, Mr. Hewlett's early days were passed chiefly "in the cage" of a profession. The cage was the Record Office, where he acquired a really remarkable knowledge of Norman French, and got some of the glimpses into medieval history which he has been able to utilise in his writings. This life was useful, but not picturesque. Perhaps, though, it may not be good, after all, for an artist to be surrounded by beautiful sights and sounds. If he sees them in their perfection before him he may be satisfied with that.

And in this case, certainly, the long artistic starvation in a dreary city and in record offices may have helped to sow in Mr. Hewlett that intense enthusiasm which burst forth when he went for the first time to Italy. It was a breakdown in health that sent him there, and he came back filled with a desire to write—and to go to the wonderful country many times again.

Several papers have said that Mlle. Yalne, who appeared for the first time at the Royalty last night, was the original Roxane in "Cyrano de Bergerac." That part was, as a matter of fact, first played by Mlle. Maria Legault, the author's cousin.

THROUGH THE "MIRROR."

RELIGION IN SCHOOLS.

This difficulty is the great question now being discussed in nearly all English homes, and if the State is determined to ignore the religion of the country, in its schools, there should at least be an acknowledgment of God, unless we are to lose all hold upon our children.

A form of prayer should be issued by the State, and a printed copy hung in every Board-school in the kingdom, and used by each teacher to begin the morning's work. All denominations acknowledge God, and the few children of atheists, or other parents who objected, could wait five minutes in a separate room and join their classes after.

It may be presumptuous for me to suggest a prayer, but in my own mind I would have it thus—

"Oh, God, we beseech Thee to bless our country and help us ever to honour and serve Thee, and lead such lives as may bring Thy blessing upon us now and always. Amen."

I would have the Lord's Prayer to follow this. There is no doctrine in the Lord's Prayer.

L'ENTENTE MUSICALE.

Why should we not return the compliment to the French nation occasioned by the visit of the famous band of La Garde Républicaine, by sending to Paris the full band of the Royal Artillery, which is, I am informed, 120 strong?

Or, if this would give them an unfair advantage in numbers, then send, say, the same number as La Garde Républicaine Band, i.e., 80 performers. I am sure they would acquaint themselves very creditably.

ARE CLERKS WANTED IN CANADA?

In answer to "Anxious," a good stenographer would not experience any difficulty in finding a berth in Toronto or Ottawa. The demand there is great. It would be advisable to have one or two references.

Such a one could earn, to commence with, from 8dols. to 9dols. per week. Cost of living, 4dols., with a private family, which would be far better than boarding out.

EMPTY HOUSES IN THE SUBURBS.

It is the greediness of ground landlords that is answerable for a great portion of the London suburbs being empty.

They make two roads where there is only room for one, and thus bring the houses close at the back, excluding all light and air.

The inhabitants are then driven to the trouble of moving to the outer suburbs.

AMERICAN HUMOUR.

Paragraphs from Comic Papers on the Other Side of the Atlantic.

A farmer went to a large city to see the sights. The rural visitor engaged a room at a hotel, and before retiring asked the clerk about the hours for dining.

"We have breakfast from six to eleven, dinner from eleven to three, and supper from three to eight," explained the clerk.
"Wa-al, say," inquired the farmer in surprise, "what time air I goin' ter git ter see ther town?"
—"Puck."

Ella: Bella told me that you told her that secret I told you not to tell her.

Stella: She's a mean thing—I told her not to tell you I told her.

"Well, I told her I wouldn't tell you she told me—so don't tell her I did."—"Exchange."

When young Meagles took the train for Harvard his father said: "As soon as you find out let me know if you have passed your entrance examinations."

Two days later, in the midst of making a heavy deal, he received the following telegram: "Yes, J. Meagles, Jr."

Somewhat preoccupied and puzzled, he telegraphed back, "Yes, what?"
The well-trained son wired back, "Yes, sir."—"Judge."

IN MY GARDEN.

FEBRUARY 26.—Yellow is perhaps the showiest and most cheerful colour we can have in a garden. First come the splendid yellow crocuses, which, when seen growing in broad masses on the turf, are wonderfully beautiful. Then there is the brilliant and easily-grown yellow alyssum, so useful in the spring garden for edging borders and planting on rockeries.

The free-flowering dioniceas should be cultivated by everyone. Lasting long in bloom and useful for cutting, they are deservedly popular.

The common broom and the double globe are very gay plants, and are pretty all the year round. Autumn brings the sunflowers, rudbeckias, helianthus, etc.

CHARACTERS IN THE STORY.

PAUL CHESTER, a clever, handsome young man, with great political ambitions.
LADY SUSAN CHESTER, his wife.
THE DUKE and DUCHESS of BERKSHIRE, the coming Prime Minister and his beautiful wife.
LORD ROBERT AYLMER, cousin to Lady Susan Chester, whom he loves.

FOR NEW READERS.

Paul Chester, the rich son of a big manufacturer, is married to a woman whom he has ceased to love, having discovered that she married him for his money. But she has learnt to love him, and is heartbroken when she sees she is losing him.

Chester has great political ambitions, and he sees an unusual opportunity of furthering his chances when he and Lady Susan are invited by a friend, Mrs. Riddell, to meet the Duke and Duchess of Berkshire. The Duke's success as a politician is largely due to his beautiful wife, who, years ago, manoeuvred him into the Cabinet, and now hopes to make him Prime Minister. She is remarkably fascinating, and has made many men fall in love with her, only to find them, that she may help her husband.

Paul Chester is extremely anxious to meet the Berkshires, for their influence might mean everything to him. But he hopelessly ruins himself. Out walking in the country, he comes upon an exceedingly beautiful woman mercilessly thrashing a small pet-dog. Chester, amazed at her cruelty, calls across her to stop. This only infuriates the woman; but he succeeds in taking the dog from her. She passionately tells him that one day he shall suffer for what he has done, and after hot words they part. That evening, in Mrs. Riddell's drawing-room, Chester is introduced to the Duchess of Berkshire, and is amazed and horrified to find himself face to face with the woman whom he had made his bitter enemy that morning. But she does not appear to be so hostile as he expected. She even hints that she wants to help him, and invites him to her country house.

CHAPTER VI. A Modern Circe.

Chester drew a deep breath, and stared at the wonderful woman facing him, and she returned his stare with a smile, then rose slowly to her feet, her foamy, chiffron frock falling about her limbs in soft, alluring folds, the whiteness of her breast and arms dazzling.

"I must go back to the drawing-room," she said slowly, and it was wonderful what a rich note she managed to put into her voice. "But I wish I could stay here, talking to you." She sighed, and her eyes for the second lost all their brilliant fire—they became misty and dreamy.

"You don't mean what you say—you know you don't," he muttered hoarsely. "What am I to you really but a man you dislike—a man you once swore to ruin?"

Henrietta laughed softly. "There are more ways than one of ruining a man," she murmured, but so low under her breath that he could not distinguish the words; then she threw back her proud, beautiful head. "I've changed my mind about you. You interest me immensely, Mr. Chester. Most people don't often do that. I'm a little weary of every-day mortals; you are different. She looked at him with her great shining eyes, and his head swam. He had never imagined such loveliness as this, such marvellous, exotic beauty! And how close she was to him; so close that her breath came hot on his cheek. He smelt the fragrance of her hair, the fragrance of her skin.

"There's one thing," she said, as she was leaving the conservatory. "I shan't ask your wife down to Helmsworth with you. I can't be bothered with clever men's wives."

He was a little staggered by her speech. In the world to which he had hitherto belonged—the world of his forebears—a husband did not go away and stay by himself. Husband and wife were asked out formally together. If not, the slight to the wife was obvious, a slight which a man calling himself a man was bound to resent. But in this new world—in this new life—everything was different and strange, and, after all, what did he owe Susan? Yet something loyal and fine in Chester's nature made him pause and hesitate, and Susan wore his ring upon her finger, and bore his name.

Henrietta glanced up at him. "You must come without your wife," she murmured, then she moved out of the conservatory, and made her way back to the drawing-room.

Chester followed her mechanically, like a man in a dream. There was a glamour about her impossible to describe, and impossible to resist. He thought of Helen of Troy, and of other beautiful and fateful women. He had wondered hitherto, in the ignorance of his honest heart, how they had been enabled to do so much harm, and to hold such empire over the hearts of men. Now he understood.

She sat down on a sofa, and was the centre of a group at once. Chester stood humbly behind her, watching the superb pose of her head, and listening to her flashes of brilliant wit and repartee.

He was not aware that Mrs. Jack was smiling at him from her seat by the fire-place, and inviting him by her eyes to cross over and talk to her, nor that the Duke himself was glancing at him in a puzzled, quiet sort of way, for Chester was in the coils of a strange unreal dream.

Lady Susan, sitting on a lounge at the far end of the room, apparently deep in conversation with her cousin, glanced up restlessly at last, and fixed her eyes on her husband, kept dead silence for a moment, then turned a pale and troubled face to Lord Robert.

"Bob," she whispered, "I can't possibly understand why the Duchess wanted to drag Paul off to the conservatory. I hope she doesn't intend to make a fool of him as she has made of so many men before."

Robert stroked his fair moustache meditatively. "Put that idea out of your head," he said quietly. "The man who has the honour and privilege of being your husband, Sue, isn't very likely to be attracted by a woman like Henrietta."

"How can you tell?" she sighed, and they say she has a very bitter with her that maddens men. She's just such another woman as Circe was or Tannhauser's Venus."

"Tannhauser's Venus?" He repeated the words slowly, then glanced reflectively at his companion.

"Not a bad comparison, Sue," he said quietly. "But I can tell you one thing, if the Duchess is Venus, you are Elizabeth."

She shook her head; a sad and hopeless expression had come over her face, marring its delicate prettiness.

"Elizabeth was a saint," she said. "I am only a failure!"

"A failure?" He glanced at her steadily, longing to tell this dear, pitiful woman that she sat enthroned for ever in his heart—queen of queens—the adored lady of his dreams. But he checked the words he wanted to say, for Susan was the wife of another man—the man who hung over Henrietta Temple listening to her gay talk, drinking in her words.

"Yes, a failure," Susan smiled bravely. "For I'm no real help to Paul," she continued, "and I don't suppose I ever shall be. I've no taste for politics, no understanding of political situations. I shall never make a great hostess."

"What's all that? That's nothing. If you love Paul, and he loves you—that's the one thing that matters."

She made no answer for the moment. When she spoke at last her voice was a mere thread of sound.

"Love—yes, of course, that's the real thing. You're quite right, Bob, nothing else really matters."

She leaned back against the lounge, and Robert noticed how blue the shadows were under her eyes, how inexpressibly frail she looked. A great fear took hold of him. Why had nobody noticed before that Susan was fading—fading as a beautiful flower fades? She had concealed her thinness so carefully, cloaking it in folds of chiffon and lace, wearing colours that suited her, trying her best to hide what he now saw plainly, the hint of disease and decay.

"Susan, you're ill. There's something wrong," he muttered. "Does Chester realise how thin you've got?"

"Thank God, no!" There was a note in Susan's voice which cut the listener to the quick. "If you care for me, Robert, if you're my friend, don't worry me by talking about my health—don't ask me if I'm happy or unhappy, just let things be."

He nodded his head, drawing a deep, hard breath. Now as ever, Susan's wish must be his law. He must restrain the wild longing he felt to ask the girl what sort of a husband Chester made, for a sudden suspicion of the truth had come upon the young man.

"Very well," he said grimly. "But, remember, if the time ever comes when you want to speak, or want help, I'm ready—waiting." She nodded her head, but made no other reply. Her eyes were still fixed on Chester. The Duchess was addressing him over her bare shoulder, smiling up radiantly into his eyes, and Chester was smiling too and laughing.

"I think I shall steal quietly out of the room," she murmured, "and go to bed. My head aches horribly."

"I should," he answered approvingly. "Go at once, Sue; bed is the best place for you."

But she did not go after all. She sat for a long, weary hour and watching Henrietta, talking to Robert in broken, disjointed fashion, pressing a cold hand every now and then to her hot forehead. But when the Duchess made a move to the billiard-room, her headache conquered her, and she retreated to bed. Robert lit her candle, pressed her fingers, then went for a solitary stroll on the terrace, and cursed Fate—and cursed Chester.

CHAPTER VII. Man and Wife.

Susan was crouching over her bedroom fire next morning, when her husband knocked at the door and came suddenly and unexpectedly into the room.

She had breakfasted in bed, but it was quite early, and the great gong had not yet sounded through the house to announce that breakfast was ready in the dining-room for those guests who cared to descend to the meal.

Chester was wearing a dressing-gown, and he looked disturbed and pale; but he flushed a little as he noticed with what astonishment his wife surveyed him. This slim, pretty creature, dressed in a soft white negligee, and whose long fair hair flowed down her back, this girl who was his wife only in name.

"You are surprised to see me, Susan, and I don't

Whooping Cough.

The best treatment for whooping cough is that which aims to relieve the symptoms, prevent complications, and improve the general health. Angier's Emulsion does all this, and does it better than any other remedy. It not only greatly relieves the spasms of coughing and retching, and prevents catarrhal complications, but it builds up strength, increases vitality, and enables the child to throw off the disease more quickly and with less danger of after ill-effects. It should be given as soon as the first symptom is noticed and continued until the whoop has ceased. Of Chemists, 1/12, 2/6 and 4/6.

AN EXTRA STRONG PICK-ME-UP WINCARNIS FOR MENTAL & PHYSICAL EXHAUSTION

RECOMMENDED BY 8,000 PHYSICIANS

KNOWLEDGE which is conducive to the preservation of health and strength is of primary importance. The profound thinker and vigorous writer, Herbert Spencer, has particularly said that "a vigorous health and its accompanying high spirits are larger elements of happiness than any other things whatever." The teaching how to maintain them is a teaching that yields to no other. The alleviation of physical suffering by medical skill is a noble work, and the profession have recognised in Coleman's Wincarnis means of recuperation to the weak and exhausted of the greatest possible value.

The blood is the fountain of life and health, the liquid stream whereby the tissues, nerves, and muscles are fed, nourished, strengthened, and maintained. Good blood and plenty of it is Nature's cure for all diseases, and it is safe to assume that if it were not for poor blood there would be no disease. If rich arterial blood courses through every part of our organism, we feel buoyant, lively, happy, and able to work, without ever feeling tired. On the other hand, if the blood is weak, watery, or congested, then the person feels limp, lifeless, mopey, irritable, and indifferent to everything.

A GIFT

We know of no better way to signify our appreciation of the medical confidence and support of Wincarnis so generously accorded us, than to offer the British public the option of testing our remedy gratis.

A NOTABLE CASE IN POINT

South Tottenham, Nov. 4, 1903.
Gentlemen,—I cannot refrain from thanking you for your inestimable Wincarnis. A month ago I had a severe illness. I vomited at frequent intervals for over 24 hours; could keep nothing on my stomach, and, of course, was exceedingly weak. My husband called in our medical attendant, and he at once advised me to get a bottle of Wincarnis. I did so, and, to my surprise, my stomach could retain it. At once I began to improve, and after taking three of your small bottles I am now quite well.

My name and that of my doctor may be given in confidence.

Merit Sells My Hair Grower THE POTENT POWER OF PERSONAL RECOMMENDATION

I have thousands of good friends throughout the world. They have never seen me, and I have never seen them; but their gratitude for recovery of their hair has taken practical shape in the recommendation of one "friend to another."

In this manner, and not by costly extravagant advertising, my well-known Hair Grower has obtained a truly large sale. It does not profess, like so many widely advertised preparations, to be an infallible specific; yet, faithfully used according to directions, it will in many cases of long-standing Baldness, Hair Falling Out, Bald Patches and Lack of Hair, bring back the hair in plentiful quantity, where hair recovery would seem to be hopeless.

This famous Formula has been endorsed by many noted analytical experts in England, France, Germany and America. Letters that are continually received show that in a few days after the first application new hair begins to grow, and continues until a healthy, strong permanent growth is manifest.

"HAIR GROWN ON HEADS WHICH HAVE BEEN BALD FOR YEARS"

This is an extraordinary assertion. I have never made it on my own responsibility, but I set it forward to your attention as being the main feature of hundreds of recommendatory letters that have reached me. I will send on request a collection of such letters for perusal. Nothing can be so satisfactory as the result of your own experience, and in order to give you the opportunity of testing the merits of this preparation at a nominal cost, I will on receipt of name and address send a LARGE TRIAL BOX for Six Stamps only. ## HINTS TO SUFFERERS FROM PREVALENT SPRING ILLS.

A CONVALESCENT'S HINTS TO OTHERS.

RULES AND REGULATIONS FOR THE WEAK AND AILING.

"Everyone seems to ail at present, and there is much influenza about. So I think," writes a convalescent, "that the experience I have gained during my own and my family's little ills may be of use to you."

If the patient is up and is suffering from rheumatism he must be most careful about diet and avoid sweets, rich wines, beer, pastry, and made-up dishes. White wine and old whisky are the best stimulants, if stimulants are a necessity. Acids are bad and should be avoided. Instead of pure salt, a mixture of bicarbonate of potash and salt in equal parts is good to take with food. Some sufferers find great relief from taking a simple rhubarb pill every night.

As a liniment, whisky and camphor in equal parts are first rate, and, again, whisky and salt, and paraffin oil, well rubbed in, does wonders for some rheumatic patients, and there are others who find relief from rubbings of mustard oil. His Majesty the King has the firmest belief in an embrocation, much advertised, which has been in use since earliest Victorian times.

Cod liver oil both for rheumatism and neuralgia is a capital remedy, but should always be taken in very small doses after meals.

For indigestion, a fat diet is a sovereign cure. Cream cheese, or clotted cream and butter, should be eaten in as large quantities as the digestion will lay your head on the pillow. Whilst on the subject of "night-caps," I may add that the most eminent of nerve specialists in London once told me that for insomnia nothing equalled a "night-cap" of hot milk and whisky.

Children require even more careful treatment than adults when attacked with cold, as their lungs are so tender. In a very cold wind motoring is dangerous even for healthy children. These are the days of non-coddling after whooping-cough, measles, and scarlatina, and the little ones are sent out as soon as they recover from the complaints. As far as my personal experience goes I have known many serious cases of pneumonia result from the hardening process.

No. 669.—Blouse for a girl, carried out in white delaine, spotted with blue and black. The sleeves must be lined to keep the puff in place, but the remainder of the blouse will be better left unlined. Material required, three and a half yards of delaine, half-yard piece lace, one and a quarter yards of batiste for lining. Flat paper-pattern, 6d.; or tacked up, including flat, 1s. 3d. Apply to the Paper-Pattern Department, 6, Carncliffe House, Carncliffe-street, E.C.

More particularly after measles it is impossible to guard a child too carefully from the effects of wind and damp.

HINTS FOR THE COOK.

ORANGE WINE.

Required to one gallon water: ten sweet oranges, one Seville orange, one lemon, and 4lb. loaf sugar. Boil the sugar and water for twenty minutes, skimming it well; then add the peel of the oranges and boil half an hour longer. Have ready a large open pan, into which has been placed the peeled fruit cut into slices, and pour the boiling syrup into it. Let this stand until lukewarm, then place two or three tablespoonsful of yeast on a piece of toast on the top, and let this work for about nine days. Strain the wine through a piece of muslin into jars, and put a small pinch of isinglass into each. Cork it down after the wine has quite finished working, and it will be ready to drink in about six months' time.

ORANGE FRITTERS.

Required, three tablespoonsful of flour, one egg, pinch of salt, one teaspoonful sugar, milk, oranges, and a pan of boiling fat.

Make a light batter with the flour, egg, salt, and milk; peel the oranges, remove the skin, and divide the fruit into natural sections, being careful not to tear the thin skin. Dip each piece of orange into the batter. See that the fat is boiling, drop in the oranges, and fry them a light brown. When done dry them before the fire. Sprinkle them with castor sugar, and serve quickly.

ORANGEADE.

Required to one quart water: the peel of two and the juice of six oranges and about ten to twelve lumps of loaf sugar to sweeten. Peel the two oranges thinly, and boil the peel with the sugar and water. Press the juice from the oranges through a fine sieve and pour over them the boiling syrup. Stir the whole well and serve it when cold. This is a favourite beverage in Paris at hedge parties.

No other Film sells it.

PARTING ADVICE

Is truly good advice if it embodies instructions to cover the floors of the home with CATESBYS' CORK LINO. From the standpoint of home beauty this is excellent advice, because CATESBYS' CORK LINO makes every home look nicer and prettier. From the standpoint of economy it is good advice, and from the standpoint of healthiness in the home it is sound advice for these reasons. CATESBYS' CORK LINO keeps disease germs away, because it gathers no dust, and it helps to maintain the wife's good health, because CATESBYS' CORK LINO protects her from injurious floor scrubbing labour.

description. REMEMBER, THIS ADVERTISEMENT WILL NEVER APPEAR AGAIN. Simply for the purpose of obtaining the names of 50,000 more bargain-hunters we again repeat—but for the last time—our own stupendous Sterling Value 2/1/- Model Skirt and Blouse offer. Before purchasing read the descriptions of goods and conditions of sale, also the testimonials of delighted customers.

50,000 15/- Model Costume Skirts for 5/- each. 50,000 Stylish 10/6 Model Blouses at 2/11 each.

Read the description at side of Skirt and side of Blouse carefully, and then go at once for Postal or Money Order and despatch with Coupon.

DESCRIPTION.

This Skirt is absolutely Tailor-made from the latest West End model, and is guaranteed to be exactly as represented. It is composed of the well-known "Imperial" Vicuna Cloth in Navy and Black, for style it cannot be beaten at even 2/11, and its hard-wearing qualities constitute it absolutely the most extraordinary bargain ever offered at the absurdly low price. Guaranteed rain drying and warranted not to cockle or spot.

Every skirt sold we look upon as a "tailor-made" advertisement. The conditions under which we sell obviate the danger of any risk to our customers, as, if the article does not give unbounded satisfaction, we gladly refund all moneys on return of Skirt. In ordering please give form at foot giving correct waist measurement and length of skirt in front, also state colour required. 30 in. waist and over 1/2 extra.
